This article is an expansion based on a canon element. For canon information, follow the link to The Witcher Wiki: Multiverse.

This fan-fiction article, Elemental Planes, was written by Witcher190. Please do not edit this fiction without the writer's permission.

For the structure of the multiverse check the Spiral article.

For the Extended Ancient Pantheon version of the multiverse, check the Multiverse article.

The universes present in the Spiral are spherical, which is why they are called spheres. These spheres are usually divided into layers like an onion, with the material plane being the first layer. These layers include the elemental and para-elemental planes (and possibly some demiplanes too), as follows:

- The Elemental Plane of Air, inhabited by djinn.
- The Elemental Plane of Earth, inhabited by dao.
- The Elemental Plane of Fire, inhabited by ifrits.
- The Elemental Plane of Water, inhabited by marids.

An unknown number of demiplanes and para-elemental planes also exist, such as the Para-Elemental Planes of Crystal, Salt, Ice, Light, Magma, Electricity, Nature, Mud, Smoke, Shadow, Dust, Sand, and Plasma to name a few. This Para-Elemental Planes are inhabited by elementa such as the following examples: The neufrae (Para-Elemental Plane of Nature). gorrash (Para-Elemental Plane of Ice), bariq (Para-Elemental Plane of Light), nar (Para-Elemental Plane of Plasma) and the janns (Para-Elemental Plane of Shadow) also known in the Northern Kingdoms as Oferi Djinn.

Beyond the elemental and para-elemental planes lies the Ether, or Ethereal Plane, a mysterious dimension entered for an infinitesimal amount of time during teleportation. It is inhabited by various ethereal entities such as hymns and perisprits.

The Chasm, or Netherworld, is a dark place from which the forbidden arts of necromancy and goetia draw their power. It is inhabited by demons and wraiths, although some demons are powerful enough to have their own personal domains (which are probably demiplanes), such as Gaunter O'Dimm and Asmodeo. A plane opposite the Netherworld is theorized to exist but has never been corroborated. Finally, the Star Domain, also known as the Astral or Sidereal Plane, or Syderium, is the source of star magic. It is inhabited by sidereal beings, such as those classified as Refaim.

When meteorites from the Astral Plane reach a world, they must traverse at least the four elemental planes if they are not destroyed upon entry.

A plane between the Netherworld and the Ethereal Plane is also theorized to exist; it is called Limbo. However, as with the plane opposite the Netherworld, its existence has never been corroborated.

Some scholars and mages theorize that, contrary to current theories, more than one material world exists in every universe, and these can be visited by traversing the Astral Plane. They also theorize that other spheres can be reached by traveling to the end of the Astral Plane. However, the current technological level impedes this exploration.

They also propose, based on the use of the Ethereal Plane for teleportation, that the elemental and para-elemental planes are one and the same in the multiverse and even in the omniverse, and one could hypothetically travel through them to other spheres. However, due to the presence of creatures such as hymns and ifrits, as well as the current technological level, this is considered very dangerous.

The composition of a sphere

If this theory is true, it would also imply that the spiral structure of the multiverse has layers as well, with each plane being a layer. This layered structure suggests a complex and interconnected cosmology, where each plane influences and interacts with the others in intricate ways.

Although this structure is not present in all universes for one reason or another, there are universes, such as the one where Earth is located and the one where the Ddiddiwedht Desert exists, where Chaos is almost non-existent. These universes do not have such layers and are directly connected to the Astral Plane. In these worlds, the absence of intermediary elemental and para-elemental layers creates a more straightforward cosmological structure, with the material world having a more direct interaction with the Astral Plane.
